“UFOs . . . God’s Celestial Air Force”
A SciFi Novel by M.P. Marshall
Read by Bob Noble

Cherry Hill Publishing announces the release of “UFOs . . . God’s Celestial Air Force,” a new full-cast audio book narrated and directed by actor Bob Noble. Available now through Amazon.com and Audible.com.

The SciFi novel, written by the late M.P. Marshall, a World War II Marine veteran of Iwo Jima, is a two-hour audio adventure into the realm of Unidentified Flying Objects. An old Guardian Angel, on Divine Probation, links up with an investigative TV reporter in an attempt to head off the ultimate destruction of Planet Earth.

Listeners will join them aboard Pulsar One as their space craft travels through outer space at warp speeds. The audio book is enhanced by original music and sound effects designed by composer, Glenn Longacre. The cast includes: Bob Noble in the dual role of narrator and the angel Gabriel, supported by the voices of Jeff Breslauer, Phran Gauci, Mark Priest and Key Howard.

Returning from the war, Marshall entered the field of radio production and later established a career as a Senior executive in numerous worldwide Advertising and Public Relation companies. Many of his novels, written when he moved to Colorado and Wyoming to escape the rat race of the corporate world, are in pre-production.

Bob Noble has been a professional actor in Motion Pictures, Television and Theatre for more than forty-years. He is a member of the Audio Publishers Association, the Society of Accredited Voice Over Artists and the International Game Developers Association. He lives in Orlando, Florida where he records from his in-home studio.

Hard copies of “UFOs . . . God’s Celestial Air Force” retail for $19.95.
Downloads from the internet are available for $9.95.
